Role of an Advisor during an Informal Conduct Meeting

- A student is welcome to invite an adviser to attend a conduct meeting.
- An adviser may be any person who has no involvement in the incident under review.
  - The University reserves the right to disqualify an individual as an adviser if there appears to be a conflict of interest.
- The adviser’s primary role is to serve in an advising capacity and provide support to the student.
- The student must complete a release form allowing the adviser to be present during the conduct meeting where personal information will be discussed.
- During the conduct meeting, questions are directed to the student; the student is welcome to seek advice on responding from their adviser at any time during the meeting.
- Responses to questions posed by the Primary Administrative Officer and designee(s) must come from the student, not the adviser.
  - Advisers are not to provide responses on behalf of the student at any time during the informal meeting.
- Advisers may converse with the student at any time during the conduct meeting.
